No way World cup will be moved from South Africa : Blatter

December 15, 2008

FIFA President Sepp Blatter on Monday insisted there was no way the 2010 World Cup would be moved from South Africa, saying any 'plan B' was now firmly dead and buried.

Rumours have persisted that the tournament could be pulled from South Africa if it failed to meet organisational deadlines after Blatter admitted earlier this year that FIFA had contingency plans.

But he moved to reassure everyone involved that South Africa would host the event, which he described as 'my baby'. "There definitely is no plan B or C. The only plan is to make the South African event a success," he said at a press conference here alongside Danny Jordaan, the head of the 2010 organising committee. "If there are still doubters, let me say that the 2010 World Cup will be organised in South Africa," he added from Japan, where he is attending the Club World Cup.

South Africa will become the first African nation to host football's four-year showpiece event, with FIFA now confident that all necessary facilities will be ready in time. There had been concern that the 10 World Cup stadiums - five new, five upgraded - would not be finished, while the country's crime rate, where 50 murders happen every day, was also a worry.

But all the issues were being dealt with, he said, adding that it would fulfil a lifelong ambition of his to see the tournament held in Africa. "Football is the most popular game in the world and in 2010 Africa will show that it is able to host a World Cup," he said. "I'll be proud because it is my baby." The Confederations Cup in June next year will be a key test of South Africa's World Cup preparedness.

Germans to get record bonus if they qualify for 2010 World cup

November 28, 2008

Germany's footballers can earn up to 200,000 euros (252,000 dollars) per man if they make it to the 2010 World Cup in South Africa, the biggest bonus to date in the nation's qualifying matches.

The German football federation DFB said in a statement on Tuesday that nominated players will get 20,000 euros per match for a maximum 200,000 euros if Germany qualify directly for the World Cup as group winner.

The sum is reduced to a maximum 165,000 euros (16,500 per match nomination) if Germany qualify via a two-legged playoff in the autumn of 2009.

The bonuses were negotiated on Monday night in a meeting of players led by captain Michael Ballack with DFB boss Theo Zwanziger and general secretary Wolfgang Niersbach.

The 200,000-euro figure is a large increase on the maximum 150,000 players earned in the qualifying campaign for Euro 2008.

Zwanziger said the raise was possible because the DFB would generate further income from a November 2009 friendly if the team qualifies directly.

gear, will be looking to the tried and trusted to spark them closer to South Africa.

England, under Fabio Capello, have enjoyed two wins from two games, the last of which was an impressive 4-1 win in Croatia which propelled the team to the top of Group Six and sent Arsenal teenager Theo Walcott's reputation into orbit. The 19-year-old, who was selected by Capello's predecessor Sven-Goran Eriksson for the 2006 finals, never got off the bench in Germany.

Spain, whose enthralling dedication to attack carried them to the Euro 2008 title, will again be looking to the fleetfooted talents of 21-year-old Arsenal star Cesc Fabregas and Liverpool striker Fernando Torres, 24, for the goals against Group Five whipping boys Estonia.

Defending world champions Italy's preparations for their qualifiers against Bulgaria and Montenegro have been disrupted by injuries to key players, but coach Marcello Lippi remains confident that they can build on their opening wins.

France, champions in 1998 and runners-up in 2006, travel to Romania lying in fourth place in Group Seven after losing to Austria in their opener before squeezing out a 2-1 win over Serbia. Defeat on Saturday could cost coach Raymond Domenech his job with the faltering World Cup campaign coming in the wake of their humiliating Euro 2008.

Germany top Group Four with four points from two games and face a tricky home clash against Russia, who defeated Wales in their only qualifier so far, in Dortmund. There are 24 qualifiers in Europe on Saturday
